

RESEARCH POTENTIAL EMPLOYERS

Work is – or should be – so much more than a paycheck.

We spend the majority of our time at work – more than on any other single activity in our lives. This makes work one of the most important relationships in our lives.

Before you enter into such a relationship, it's a good idea to get to know about your potential other half.

Below are some sources you can use to research potential employers at any point in your job search.

Business Journals Local Business Directories - Searchable directories of businesses for more than 40 large cities.

CareerBliss – Get reviews and other critical information (tips, trends, salaries and more) for more than 700,000 companies.

CareerOneStop – Among other magnificent tools, CareerOneStop has a Business Finder you can use to search millions of companies.

Comparably – This site lets you compare employers, brands, salaries and more and hooks you up with news about each.

FairyGodBoss – Research companies, reviews, salaries and engage in discovery conversations with other job seekers here.

FirstHand and Vault – Search companies, reviews, rankings, industries and more.

Glassdoor.com - Get the deets on hundreds of thousands of companies, including real reviews, compensation figures by position, interview experiences and more.

LinkedIn – The Jobs > Search feature lets you search for companies based on Industry, Job Function, Job Title, and Location.

The Muse – Get job and company information, as well as expert advice and even coaching services here.

Hope this is helpful for you.

Go get your next great (working) relationship.
